

Keekorok Lodge

At the southern end of 1,510 sq km Mara paradise, and right in the path of the annual migration of wildebeest and zebra, lies Keekorok Lodge. Approximately 280 kms from Nairobi it was the first lodge to be built in the Mara in 1965. During the migration, the lodge is enveloped by the swarming mass of animals, but during the rest of the year one hardly needs to venture from the grounds for game viewing as there is always plenty of activity around the waterhole.

Accommodation at Keekorok Lodge is in bungalows, single story blocks, and in comfortable shaded chalets. Keekorok's charm lies in the liberal use of cedar wood, pink and gray sand river stone, and other indigenous building materials offset the green lawns and colorful bougainvillea. There is a wide range of accommodation.

Rooms are simple but tastefully furnished, many with a breathtaking view of the Mara. A 300m walkway meanders through the riverine forest in front of Keekorok with a small bar at one end overlooking a dam where the resident hippo, if he is not on walk about finds his observers as fascinating as they find him. There are no fences around Keekorok and it is not uncommon to see elephant and buffalo on the perimeter of the grounds or even strolling in.

Early morning and afternoon game drives offer animal encounters unparalleled in the world all the year round. Here you can enjoy a day in the fresh air, the excitement of game spotting, a refreshing dip in the swimming pool, and the ritual of sundowners by the roaring log fire in the lounge which heralds an evening full of traditional Maasai dancing under a star studded sky.
