

Honeyguide Tented Camp ~ Manyeleti Game Reserve

Honeyguide Tented Camp, nestled in a riverine forest in the Manyeleti Game Reserve, is reminiscent of the early twentieth century hunting safari camp. With only twelve large canvas tents divided between two camps, the atmosphere is intimate, private and tranquil. The Manyeleti Game Reserve is located on the western boundary of South Africa's great Kruger National Park. The Manyeleti Reserve is one of the most game-rich parts of the greater Kruger eco-system, and is home to Africa's 'big five' (lion, leopard, elephant, rhino, and buffalo), as well as hundreds of other species of African animals, including well-known species like zebra, giraffe, wildebeest, cheetah, and a host of others.

Game-drive safaris at Honeyguide Tented Camp are conducted in specially adapted open Landrovers carrying a maximum of nine guests, with professional guides and trackers to help find animals, and then provide interesting background information and facts about Africa's spectacular wildlife.

Honeyguide Tented Safari Camp is set in a Tamboti grove on a small river line where two camps are available: Main Camp – Mantobeni (where game-drives, night-drives, and walking are on offer), and the Trails Camp- Khoka Moya Camp (which specializes in walking safaris). Each camp has 12 tents with twin or double beds, en-suite bathroom with hot and cold running water, showers and flush toilets.

The en-suite accommodation is basic but very tasteful and comfortable, with an emphasis on quality. For example, the sheets are fine white cotton, bedspreads are hunter green canvas ticking, and all taps and water pipes are copper. Furnishings in each tent include a sturdy wicker chair and heavy teak tables. There is a lovely wooden commode in the bathroom and a tin bathtub set in molded clay with antique taps. Electricity is provided and amps take the form of unobtrusive kerosene lanterns. The result is authentic and romantic - very "Out of Africa." Dining in the starlit boma after a long day exploring the bush is a treat in Manyeleti which means "place of the stars" in the local Shangaan language - a very fitting name.
