

Serena Selous Wildlife Lodge

This luxury tented camp is situated on the Simbazi River, a tributary of the Rufiji River in Tanzania's vast Selous Game Reserve.

Selous Wildlife Lodge comprises 12 tents positioned under individually grass-thatched structures which are luxuriously furnished with adjoining beautifully appointed majestic bathrooms.

Each tent enjoys outstanding views of untouched wilderness, with scatterings of enormous trees and lush, dense vegetation. The lodge has a separate dining area and guest lounge overlooking the natural watering hole which is also lit in the evenings for night viewings. This is all complemented by an outside viewing deck and swimming pool.

The Lodge is 45 minutes flight from Dar-es-Salaam to Stiegler airstrip with both the Coastal and Indigo airlines. From here, a pleasant 30minute game drive will get you to either of the lodges. Both airlines fly to and from Stiegler airstrip twice a day.

The Selous Game Reserve is a vast area accounting for 5% of the land mass of Tanzania contained within the reserve boundaries and the second largest conservation area in Africa, the largest game reserve on the continent and a proclaimed World Heritage Site. It has one of the largest areas set aside for wildlife preservation anywhere in the world. This is an area that naturally appeals to a photographic lens, as the waterways and plains reflect all the changing colors of the sun and attract numerous fine-feathered water birds and raptors. The spectrum of wildlife here is diverse, with plentiful populations of Elephant and Wild dog and is all the more interesting because its southern location attracts a unique combination of East and Southern African wildlife, both resident and migratory, and particularly a curious and colorful assortment of over 440 known species of birds.
