

Shackletons Upper Zambezi Lodge

Shackletons is situated in south-western Zambia on the Upper Zambezi River near the village of Mwandi (meaning a place of 'plenty fish').

Shackletons provides access to 130km of the Upper Zambezi River, called 'God's Highway' by David Livingstone. Shackletons is open all year round, even when the river floods its banks each year to form the Zambezi floodplains.

Shackletons is a premier venue for spin, lure and fly anglers of all levels to fish for trophy Tigerfish, Bream, Tilapia and Catfish.

Shackletons is home to nearly 300 bird species that can be spotted at the Lodge, or by boat along the river banks, or by Mokorro in the tranquil river channels.

The Lodge accommodates 12 people in thatched, en-suite chalets with private teak decks overlooking the Zambezi. The swimming pool, sun downer deck, lounge, open dining area, and riverside bar provide guests with unparalleled vistas of the mighty Upper Zambezi River.

At Shackletons you, your family and your friends will be spoiled by the Zambian culture, the pristine waters of the Upper Zambezi, the peace and tranquillity of the Lodge, the exciting fishing, the abundant bird life, and the unsurpassed friendly hospitality of the Shackletons people.
