

DAMARALAND CAMP

Damaraland is a region of early morning mists which are generated by the clash between the icy Atlantic Ocean and the warm desert air of the Skeleton Coast. The mists drift inland along the river sand canyon, providing sustenance to the flora and fauna of the region. This comfortable is one of the best wilderness areas in Namibia.

Situated on the north slopes of the Huab River terraces is a camp that practices holistic tourism. The Damaraland Camp integrates the local community, environment and wildlife, offering a true wilderness experience in magnificent surroundings. Eight large tents in east African style face the southern view, each with en-suite bathrooms with hot and cold showers, basin and toilet. There is also a family unit comprising two meru tents connected by a bathroom.

Shaded verandas afford a place to sit and read, catch up on mail or just enjoy the endless views. The lapa combines dining and social area, with an open fire for the chilly evenings. A small rock pool nestles at the foot of an ancient waterfall in a nearby ravine. Desert adapted elephant frequent the dry river lines along with an amazing variety of other wildlife. Strange plants play host to stranger insects and your guide brings insight to the questions and answers of survival in a desert environment.

The area offers excellent walking and mountain biking for the more adventurous.

Please, at all times, keep in mind that there are no fences between you and the environment and that the animals are wild.
